A visit to the home of books.

Why is there thunder and rain?

Why are there four seasons in a year?

Why are there oceans and land?

Why do turtles shed tears?

Why do insects shed their shells?

Why are there writings?

Why do we need study?

Why eat moon cakes during Mid-Autumn Festival?

Who is Confucius? Who is Li Bai?

Who will do the "seventy-two change" in "Journey to the West"?

These questions are interesting,

The answers are all in books.

The library is the home of books,

Come! Let's visit it together!

Book title: Rabbit Hill

My takeaways / Book review

This book is so interesting! After reading it for the first time, I wanted to become the main character in the story, to live with the little cute animals.

Rabbit Hill has a new neighbour, and the little animals are wary of this family. However, the family saved Willy the field mouse's life and even put up a road sign that reads: "There are small animals inside, drive carefully!"

的“兔子坡”！

The new neighbour also invites small animals to eat the crops they have worked hard for! The little animals were very moved and became friends with them.

Later, George the Rabbit was injured and disappeared after being brought home by the new neighbour. Everyone thought George had been killed by them. After George recovered, he came out and explain the truth, and so everyone knew that the new neighbour are good people. The little animals are very grateful, and they take turns guarding the new neighbour's vegetable garden, so that they can have a good harvest.

When humans and animals coexist peacefully, the world will become like this "rabbit hill", so full of joy!

That night,
I forgot to close the windows,
The wind slipped in,
It flipped the book on the table,

After a while,
The rain slipped in too,
It dripped tears,
On the last page of “The Happy Prince”.
