'Flower-antler' deer

The little deer was sick, the antlers on his head turned white, and he was very sad.

One day, a bird found some hay and branches and flew to his head to build a nest.

With the little bird by his side, little deer felt very happy.

When it rained, little deer ran under the tree, that shield the book from the rain; when the sky cleared, little deer then stood in the sun, and the bird's feathers dried quickly. They became good friends.

The little bird also found some flowers and put them on the deer's antlers. Little deer became a beautiful 'flower-antler' deer.

Additional note: 'Horns' on deers are called antlers, while 'horns' on cows, goats and antelopes are still called horns.
